Dear Los Angeles City Council:

I am a long-time resident of our city, and I am writing to express my appreciation on your efforts to establish boundaries to that which is harming the environment. I understand that the ordinance for plastic bags has been a big step for our state considering that the city of Los Angeles is likely to be joined by other cities looking for a way to live environmentally cleaner.

As you know, much of the plastic bags created in our community end up on the streets, littering the environment and proving great eye sores. Few of us are capable of doing something to better the health of our environment on a large scale, but it is good to know that those who can do.

This letter is in appreciation to the ordinance passed and people like you, willing to not only lead but also educate the people in the environmental movement. What the council does today will help many of the families and individuals in the city of Los Angeles to work toward a brighter future and education whether they are aware or not.

Thank you again, for doing all you do.

Sincerely,

Rita Guerrero
