Dear Mr. Williams,

I'd like to add this email to the Council File 14-1371-S2

Whereas the city of Los Angeles requires all registered businesses to hold a Business Tax Registration Certificate— this confirms that the city has the names and addresses of all these businesses.

Whereas many of these businesses are not specifically aware of the proposed minimum wage increase proposals being discussed, as they may or may not watch the news or read the newspaper, and whereas I have found many business not even aware of the proposals or details of the proposals, I am requesting, as a concerned small business owner, that the city use the addresses and names it already has on file to mail the information to all registered business tax certificate holders, so they to may have a voice in this conversation, or at minimum plan their lives, as the proposal in some form will effect many businesses and their employees.

A letter simply stating what the proposed measures are. That's all.

I feel this is fair, as when someone requests to open a store, sell wine or even modify a property, add a parking stall and more, (all very small issues when compared to the wage proposal), are required to send mailers and much more.

Let's all work together towards a common goal of a better life for all, and in keeping everyone involved in the conversation.

Thank you
