THE CALIFORNIA EXPERIMENT

How Cohen profited from his access

Though attorney made big money off his connections to the new president, and his travels he followed

WASHINGTON — The weeks before last saw one of the most dramatic moments in the history of the White House. Barack Obama had just been sworn in as president, and the new administration was beginning to take shape.

At the time, Obama was surrounded by a group of advisers, including a former aide to Bill Clinton, who had been recruited to help him organize the transition. It was this group that was responsible for the selection of the new vice president, Joe Biden.

Obama's transition team was a mix of experienced political operatives and newcomers. One of the most prominent figures in the group was Rahm Emanuel, Obama's first chief of staff. Emanuel had worked for Clinton and was known for his ability to get things done in a fast-paced environment.

Obama's transition team was also responsible for the selection of the new cabinet members. Obama's choice of cabinet members was a mix of experienced political operatives and newcomers. One of the most prominent figures in the group was Rahm Emanuel, Obama's first chief of staff.

Bright lights, big show for 3 freed men

California released three men from prison last week, and the news was greeted with relief and excitement. The men had been in prison for years, and their release was seen as a victory for the state's justice system.
