Good morning, Adam:

This is a quick note to please urge you to do whatever you can to ban all fur-trade sales in Los Angeles, California is a leader for the nation, and while I can appreciate that affects people's livelihoods, as the human-collective we need to move forward in consciousness and move away from such barbaric practices such as skinning animals alive in the name of vanity. Certainly one can agree that this climate does not require the wearing of fur. I strongly believe and know in my heart that our connection to this planet and all of it's species is what is slowly but surely killing us and making people sick — sick at the core, in their hearts. We can no longer do this to ourselves, to our home, and to all of our relations. We must move beyond the paradigm where money rules all. It is only so because we've made it so. Please step outside this brutal paradigm and trail-blaze — clear the path so that we can all live more peacefully and in harmony with each other, in a world focused on sustainability, conservation, and love.

If you haven't watched videos of what it takes to make a fur coat, I sincerely urge you to do so. I wish I never had, but now I know. It is a nightmare, but our ignorance is no excuse.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Whitney Cline
