Comments for Public Posting: I am disturbed by the current proposed budget for the city of Los Angeles giving only $163 million to housing and community development and a staggering $3.1 billion to the LAPD. In the midst of a global pandemic and the coming financial and eviction crisis that will follow, I find it incredibly disturbing that we are allocating precious resources to increase policing. Our budget should be focused on providing financial assistance and housing to Angelenos in need, so that bulking up a police force (that primarily terrorizes communities of color) is not necessary.

Comments for Public Posting: Too much spending on police, not enough on homelessness.

Comments for Public Posting: The Mayor and all the Councilmembers should set the example and cut their own office budgets substantially and start temporary or permanent staff member reductions before asking other departments and employees to furlough.
