On December 1, 2020 at 12:35pm, I spoke by phone to Jennifer Rivera representing the California Independent Petroleum Association.

Over the course of our conversation, she indicated that if the Council were going to contemplate any policy to deprive oil producers of their extraction rights at any time in the future, essentially anything other than proceeding with an amortization analysis, that the industry would certainly file suit to challenge the policy. This includes the 20 year period that was contemplated in LAMC 12.23(C)4(b) from 1946.
