Comments for Public Posting: Rodeo animals are treated better then any other animal around or even people. Bucking bulls are breed to buck. Just like a bird dog is breed to hunt birds. You don't even have to teach them they just do it cuz it is in there Blood. They are not just an animal they are athletes. When ya hook up the trailer the bulls coming running and a bucking wanting to get on the buss and go to the rodeo. When your just sitting out watching them in the field they get hipper and start bucking just to buck. They get the best grain and hey you can find. They have the best cover areas and bedding. They get the best care everyday! They are loved and well cared for. Go visit a stock contractors home and see for yourself before you let others make up things they don't know anything about. I'm sure ANY stock contractor would be open to have you come to their ranch or the rodeos and meet the athletes & be able to educate people with any questions or concerns one might have!

Comments for Public Posting: I am extremely involved in rodeo and know what it looks like behind the scenes and to say this is animal abuse is absurd! These animals are better taken care of than most humans, they see a vet on a regular basis, are fed extremely well, better than a wild animal, are kept in barns, many heated or air conditioned. People in rodeo absolutely love their animals and go to extreme lengths to make sure theyre happy and healthy. So anyone saying this is animal abuse needs to go behind the scenes and live the day of a life of a rodeo horse! The people claiming this have absolutely NO CLUE!

Comments for Public Posting: Rodeo is a family friendly sport where the participants become family. Contrary to what some people say, the animals are treated very well. The horses that rodeo athletes ride are their partners and their health is prioritized. Even the bucking bulls and the broncs are treated very well - they only have to work for 8 seconds in each performance.

Comments for Public Posting: The care rodeo livestock receive is the absolute best in the World! They are fed high quality forage, grain and have access to fresh water at all times. These rodeo athletes and livestock owners take pride in caring for their animals, that are their livelihoods and part of their families. These animals live out long, great lives, working and accomplishing great things. If you watch the really talented ones, just like a human athlete, they just have a glow about them, a confidence you cannot describe. It's truly amazing. Rodeo means so much more to all of us than just a sport.
