Comments for Public Posting: The rodeo is part of our culture here. These animals are both loved and respected. If you look at what being a cowboy is and means and how much more than just riding it is. I can't fathom how any American would want to put an end to this tradition and heritage.

Comments for Public Posting: Please know as a great grandmother, how important our way of life is. We love our animals, we take good care of them. Just like the stock contractors, and contestants. Rodeo and the western way of life has blessed me and my family immensely. Paid for both of my grandsons college education. Because of our animals my children and grandchildren and now my great grand children know what it is to take care of animals before their self. It teaches young children to be out working, and taking good care of all the animals that God has so graciously given us. Please consider our way of life when making your decision. May God give you wisdom. jF ...please check out all these ugly lies that have been told about our way of life before making a decision thank you in advance.jF

Comments for Public Posting: I have been around the western life style and rodeo all my life. I still team rope at age 83. It is the participants that take the greatness risk of injury, life time disability and even death, which I have witnessed. I have never seen livestock hauled out of an arena. The livestock are a major investment to purchase, feed and care of, for the producers of the western events. They receive the best of care to stay healthy and strong, because they provide the income for the producers. The children that have been raised around the western environment are the most honest and respectable young people I have had the pleasure of being around. LONG LIVE RODEO.
