Comments for Public Posting: The main argument I hear against banning certain instruments, like bucking straps, in rodeos is that the ban is attacking Hispanic culture. The reality is bucking straps are not part of Hispanic culture, or anyone's culture, as they are an instrument of pain that was developed long after Charreada culture developed. I attended and video recorded a Charreada about 30 years ago and there was no bucking strap in use, despite that the American rodeos were using bucking straps at the time. If people want to have rodeos then instruments of pain, that were developed long after rodeos, should be banned and people can rdoeo as they did when rodeo was created. Comments for Public Posting: The rodeo is a beloved staple to American culture. The Western Sports Coalition Industry allows people to display their love for the rodeo. Please keep the rodeo in LA. We are already a hub for various cultures and ethnicities so please help keep the rodeo culture alive!
