Comments for Public Posting: Growing up in colorado on a ranch with rodeo has taught me value and respect. The lessons i learn with my country life and rodeo is the strongest values and we also the hardest working people These animals with rodeo are meant for rodeo and trying to take away history in the western world is wrong. As a trainer in horses and dogs I can tell you these animals love what they do. Do not take away rodeo. And for all these people that want to say animal cruelty and himanize them well i can assure u that if u own a animal that u have contained and pampered and humanized to a life u think is meant for them i can assure you that is cruel to them. Ignorance in a life you dont know anything about is cruel, and taking away our lifestyle because it dont fit with yours is cruel. We give our life purpose our animals have purpose. Im happy to take a animal you have for a week and i assure you the western life will bring them back to their roots and youd see them come alive and be a wonderful animal. These rodeo animals you think are abused i see a animal that is getting good feed, and health care and also they are alive and they get care. Where do you think they be if they didnt have a job or purpose. Ignorance is not having all the facts, do not judge a way of life or animals you truly know nothing about until u spend the time to learn. So the time u spend to fight a life that this country has loved. Spend a week on a ranch, go behind the scene and actually learn the truth and gain knowledge instead of the small box u live in

I grew up in a rodeo based culture and have raised my family immersed in it as a means of our social lives, as well as continuing tradition and culture as well as life skills and abilities. Performances bring that to people as spectators that may never experience our livelihood and maintains a culture and history of our nation rooted in the lifestyle and elevation of the cowboy.
